New Year's Resolutions about Books

- I will give some of my 8,760 hours during the year to good reading.
- I will meet every book with an open mind.
- I will not read the last page first.
- I will hate the villain and love the heroine.
- I will renew friendships with old books.
- I will try to be patient when the author draws a moral.
- I will come to a sad ending with a dry eye—or I will try.
- I will not finish a stupid book simply because I have started to read it.
- I will refuse to pay any attention to strange noises and cracking sounds when I read a detective story after twelve o'clock.
- I will try not to use violence when anyone tells me how a story ends.
- I will be wary of those books which are written to be very funny.
- I will never get too old to enjoy stories for children.
- I will always believe in fairies whether they are true or not.
- I will read in bed and prove to the doctor that it doesn't matter.
- I will not skip description for conversation.
- I will remember that authors of books are merely men and women and not gods.
- I will not irritate my friends by reading aloud to them.
- I will not forget sometimes to read the Bible.
- I will use good books as food for the mind.
- I will try not to be provoked by a mere author's power over me.
- I will reflect on the power of new ideas and of their source in books.
- I will read a helpful practical book as often as every other week.
- I will lead myself as fast as possible away from trash.

"The innocence and completeness with which the child's spirit is rendered up to the book, its utter absorption and forgetfulness always moves me deeply. A child does not read to criticise and compare, but just in the unsullied joy of finding itself in a new world. And behind every such child is the heart and brain of some teacher, parent or librarian that makes the book possible." --Christopher Morley.

Keep Me. I mean hours of release from the too-narrow confines of the daily round; many excursions into the realm of strangeness—that blessed Unfamiliar into which those whose mental pores feel clogged with the dust of the common way may plunge as into a refreshing bath. I mean a constant widening of boundaries, a deepening of sympathies, a lengthening of views.
Keep me as a guide to your reading: I shall mean greater mental stature, riper and more temperate judgments, ideas more informed by comparison and contrast, every corner of your mind better furnished, its every attitude more just. I mean: All Good Books. —Adapted from Century Company

If you could get but one result out of your university course
I would rather you would get a love for and habit of reading good books than any other. With such a feeling and habit you will become educated and cultured men and women, and without them there is little if any chance of your doing so. --Herbert S. Hadley, Chancellor,

It requires as much art to see a book as it really is and then to convey that perception by nicely chosen words as to write a short story —more art than to write a standardized short story. To suggest quality, to impart purpose, to inspire reading, to attain a triple unity of the book, the review, and the reader's impression, is a fine art. --From an editorial (probably by Henry Seidel Canby) in Saturday Review of Literature, Aug. 2, 1924.

Education is the most pervasive and lasting of influences, especially a bad education, and if it gives the mind rules without power of thinking it handcuffs the intellect to convention. And it is equally true that the naturally fine mind which has to educate itself, and does so, is unbeatable. So is the castaway on the desert island who survives by learning to subsist on his own resources; but we do not recommend desert islands as a universal experience.

When education is no more than discipline—and the idea that it should be just discipline lurks in many a teacher's consciousness—it crushes the buds of originality as fast as they put out, but to grow undisciplined minds is not the answer to the problem. It is a hundred times easier to point out men and women of distinction who have suffered for lack of a formal education than the reverse. —From an editorial (probably by Henry Seidel Canby) in Saturday Review of Literature, Feb. 7, 1925.

Are You Educated?

The educated man is a man with certain subtle spiritual qualities which make him calm in adversity, happy when alone, just in his dealings, rational and sane in the fullest meaning of the word in all the affairs of his life. --Ramsay McDonald, quoted in Scribner's Magazine.

The Educated Man

Such a man must have been humble in the presence of great minds and great souls, must have been simple in contacts with his fellows, and must have been indefatigable in his desire to cultivate and to maintain the power of his mind and to accumulate that knowledge which makes up the data of accurate reasoning. —President Hopkins, of Dartmouth College, quoted in Scribner's Magazine.

A Recipe For Education.

To infinite patience add a little wisdom, carefully strained through profitable experience. Pour in a brimming measure of the milk of human kindness, and season well with the salt of common sense. Boil gently over a friendly fire made of fine enthusiasms, stirring constantly with just discipline. When it has boiled long enough to be thoroughly blended, transfuse it by wise teaching to the eager mind of a restless boy and set away to cool. Tomorrow he will greet you an educated man.

--Edwin Osgood Grover.

The discriminating man or woman does not choose his or her friends at random--most assuredly not! First an introduction is required; second, something about the person's character and occupation must be known, and third, a general appraisal of his or her qualities is made.

Yet, how many fastidious men and women choose their books at random! Just as they might walk down a crowded avenue and to the first person they meet extend an invitation to tea, so they go into the first bookshop and purchase the book which is most conspicuously placed.

They forget that books must be brought into their home on the footing of friends. Friends--books! The two are really synonymous, for one can take the place of the other with the utmost ease. --Chicago Daily News.

My Symphony

To be content with small means; to seek elegance rather than luxury, and refinement rather than fashion; to be worthy not respectable, and wealthy, not rich; to study hard, think quietly, talk gently, act frankly; to listen to stars and birds, to babes and sages, with open heart; to bear all cheerfully, do all bravely, await occasions, hurry never. In a word, to let the spiritual, unbidden and unconscious grow up through the common. This is to be my symphony. --Channing.

Passing It On

1. The College President-
Such rawness in a student is a shame,
But lack of preparation is to blame.
2. The High School Principal-
Good Heavens, What crudity! The boy's a fool,
The fault, of course is with the grammar school.
3. The Grammar Principal-
O that from such a dunce I might be spared,
They send them up to me so unprepared.
4. The Primary Principal-
Poor kindergarten blockhead! And they call
That preparation! Worse than none at all.
5. The Kindergarten Teacher-
Never such lack of training did I see
What sort of person can the mother be?
6. The Mother-
You stupid child! but then you are not to blame
Your father's family are all the same.

Straus, Ralph. Unseemly adventure. 1924. F St82u

+ + + + + + + + + + + + + + + + + + +

I like to have my books speak to me, and then I like to talk back to them.

Our friends are mirrors in which our thoughts are reflected. We exchange expression, and then we understand ourselves that much better. Without our friends we would shrivel and become very commonplace.

Books, are next to friends, the greatest gifts we may own.

But you must read your books and friends aright. You cannot skim over them and get them. You must interpret as you read. You must mix understanding with the expressed thoughts of your book and with those of your friends.

Your book is a silent visitor. You may say to it what you wish. You may disagree, you may even scold it if you like; but you must give it full credit.

Live your book as you read it. Translate its inspiration into better thoughts, into a better day— into yourself in such a way as to have made the reading profitable.

Read slowly. Absorb the thoughts that run across the pages of your book.

Read with a pad and pencil. Put down the phrases that most impress you and which you feel offer food for thought and helpfulness.

Mark your books as you come across passages which are striking. Every time you take up that book later it will give you a new thrill of pleasure.

Read to grow, to stimulate and fertilize your mind. —Phillips Brooks.

To live in the affections; not to dwell in pride.
To cultivate courtesy, which fosters brotherhood and is the manner of the heart.
To be gentle with those who serve, since they are not free to resent.
To avoid arrogance, which corrodes the man and estranges his fellows.
To mingle freely with all classes, and thus to know mankind.
To be mastered by no habit or prejudice, no triumph or misfortune.
To promise rarely, and perform faithfully.
To choose hobbies with care, and pursue them with diligence.
To value people above thoughts, and thoughts above things.
To curb the personal wants, which expand easily but shrink with difficulty.
To forswear luxuries, ever indulged by shunting the cost on to others.
To be just, man's supreme virtue, which requires the best of head and heart. —Robert McMurdy

There is a kinship between teachers and librarians. For there is something in the method and in the mental attitude and vision of the good teacher which the librarian must have in helping people to know and use books. But both ought to have the ague, or something like it, to shake out of them arbitrary ways of reading books and of understanding life.—W.H.Kerr on Latin and the ague, in the Pomona College Quarterly, October, 1925.

A Gift to a Child

He who gives a child a book
Gives that child a sweeping look
Through its pages
Down the ages;

Gives that child a ship to sail
Where the far adventures hail
Down the sea
Of destiny;

Gives that child a vision,—wide
As the skies where stars abide Anchored in
 The love of him;

Gives that child great dreams to dream:
Sun-lit ways that glint and gleam
Where the sages
Tramp the ages. --Rev. Wm. L. Stidger,
Saint Mark's M.E. Church, Detroit.

November Afternoon

The purple downland's splendid amethyst
Crowns regally this brief November day
Whose jeweled sceptre is the thorny spray
Where fond bird-lovers once kept April tryst:
Ocean is veiled with pearl-embroidered mist
Agleam with opals set amid the gray,
As cold waves cut a slow, encroaching way
That silver-armored cliffs may not resist:

In cloistered woods a shrine of amber glows,
With rubies redder than a summer rose,
Where prisoned sunshine smoulders in the leaf.

By mute cloud-maidens garbed in aery snows,
Ere yet the sapphire gates of Heaven close,
Daylight is garnered as a golden sheaf.
--Henesa Taylor.

|--|---|
| I would not turn the pages back
To any day that's past;
Nor would I look into the days
That come so fleet and fast. | I would not live again old years
And make old sad mistakes,
I would not shed the same old tears
And meet the same heartbreaks. |
|--|---|

Nor would I press ahead to reach
The future's joy and pain;
Let me but hold these dear days close
That may not come again.
